Product Description

Product features:

The refrigeration unit adopts frequency conversion technology, which can automatically adjust the refrigeration power according to the temperature change in the compartment, realizing precise temperature control, and at the same time, reducing energy consumption and prolonging the service life of the refrigeration unit.

Isuzu refrigerated truck compartment adopts multi-layer heat preservation structure, with remarkable heat preservation effect, which can effectively block the intrusion of external heat and maintain the stability of low temperature environment in the compartment.

Intelligent lighting control system is installed, which can automatically adjust the light brightness according to the light and cargo loading and unloading needs in the compartment, improving the lighting effect and saving energy at the same time.

Product usage:

Suitable for pharmaceutical cold chain transportation that requires high temperature accuracy, frequency conversion refrigeration ensures accurate temperature of drug storage.

In long-distance cold chain transportation, the multi-layer heat preservation structure protects the quality of the goods in long-distance transportation.

Provide efficient lighting for warehouses and logistics distribution centers, intelligent lighting system improves operational efficiency and energy utilization.

Product advantages:

Good passability expands the transportation range and meets the needs of cold chain in different regions.

Humanized design improves operational efficiency and reduces labor costs.

Real-time temperature monitoring makes the transportation process more transparent and guarantees the safety of goods.
